Masking

Masking

- ❖ Generally speaking, Masking is the process (during a photo editing) to “isolate” part of the photo in order to do editing just on that part.
- ❖ Masking has been a key feature of Photoshop for many years (it was introduced with Photoshop 3.0 in September 1994).
- ❖ Over the years, this functionality has been added to a lot of Image Editing programs.
- ❖ The Masking process has been always a somewhat time consuming effort especially if the area of the photo one wants to isolate is quite complicated (think of a head shot with hair in the air).

Masking

- ❖ Fortunately, the software companies have enhanced significantly the masking capability of their programs and today the whole process is much simpler and faster.
- ❖ Two weeks ago, Adobe has introduced new versions of Photoshop and Lightroom with major improvements of the masking ability with extensive use of AI (Artificial Intelligence).
- ❖ The new improvements are very similar for both products and the following video present them as implemented in Lightroom.

iPhone Photography

- ❖ As I keep saying, more and more I am using my iPhone 13 Pro as my “go to camera” given its portability and high quality of its camera.
- ❖ Mastering photography with a smartphone like the iPhone is somewhat different than mastering a traditional digital camera and therefore there are new things that one has to learn in order to take professional grade photos with the iPhone.
- ❖ The following video explains the top three things that one has to remember to achieve these results.
